

ABSTRACT

An apparatus for baking an article in a mold comprises retractable mold portions that define a mold cavity, at least one mold portion having associated therewith a mold stripper, the mold stripper fitting within the mold portion and being capable of remaining in contact with the baked article while the mold portion is retracted, to facilitate release of said baked article from said mold portion.